NEW ENGLAND DEACONESS HOSPITAL

What Does Christmas Mean To You?

"Give me the good old days!" We often hear that expression, yet few of us really want to go back to the lives we lived 25 or 50 years ago. The conveniences we expect today were unknown then. There were fewer labor-saving devices, transportation was more difficult, communications were often a problem, social security was unknown, medical care was far behind today's standards, hospitalizations were long and only a privileged few were covered by hospitalization insurance.

I believe, however, that at this time of year many of us would like to go back to Christmas as it was observed in years gone by. Christmas, of all seasons, should be a time of simplicity. And yet the hectic era in which we now live has brought changes in the observance of the Christmas season far from its original meaning.

The commercials on radio, television and in publications have a far greater impact on our lives than most of us realize. The American public has a limited choice in the merchandise it buys. It's available in quantities, but the designers and manufacturers decide what styles are best for us and through the medium of advertising convince us that we should buy the goods they produce. Present day automobiles are excellent examples. How many of you have "fins" on your car? Do you like them? Can you get in and out comfortably? Do you have enough headroom? In American cars you have little choice except as to the size of car you want.

Within two weeks next year's styles in clothing will be on display. Every attempt will be made to change styles enough to insure that wearing the perfectly good suit in the closet will mark you as being behind the times.

We are accepting changes in our cars that we would not have accepted in years gone by. We are wearing colors and styles of clothing that we would have laughed at in the past. What about Christmas? Hasn't it changed fully as much as the design of cars and clothing? Here, however, we have a choice. The difference lies in the fact that the spirit of Christmas is not a commodity we purchase.

Few of us have been able to keep Christmas as simple and real as its meaning implies. "Glory to God in the highest. Peace on earth and good will toward men." Let us turn back the clock to the time when Christmas was less commercial — to the time when Christmas was a season of tranquility and peace, of family closeness and love.

I think that we will all agree that in the "good old days" more spiritual emphasis was given to this holiest of seasons. Let us rebel against the present commercialism of our Yuletide season and earnestly endeavor to reach back to the Christ who brought us the first Christmas in the manger at Bethlehem.

R. D. Lowry

Deaconess Employees Sing, Dance and Eat at Christmas Party

The hospital was host to its employees on Friday, December 18, when the annual Christmas party was held in the cafeteria with refreshments, dancing and singing among the festivities.

Paul Monaghan and his orchestra provided the music — both old and new favorites.

Included in the party menu were punch, egg-nog, cakes and cookies. Following the custom of past years, a pound box of candy was given to each employee.

This was a prelude to Christmas Day, when all employees are invited to be guests of the hospital for a turkey dinner with as many delightful trimmings as Miss Winger's dietary staff can devise.

CRI HAMSTERS GO TO TOKYO

Nine tiny passengers were placed aboard a Pan-American jet bound for Tokyo, Japan, recently, to complete a journey which began at the Cancer Research Institute.

The passengers — hamsters of a strain especially suited for a specific type of cancer research — were well prepared for hazards of the trip. Problems involved in assuring their safe and "healthy" arrival in Japan were solved by several employees under the direction of Dr. Olive Gates.

Shipment of the small animals had been requested by Dr. Yasuyuki Egashira of the Department of Pathology at the National Institute of Health in Tokyo. In 1957 he spent several months at CRI studying the various types of tumors that had been grown in the cheek pouches of the special strain of hamster.

Wishing to continue these studies in his native land, he wrote to Dr. Gates and requested the tumor specimens. The hamsters themselves had to be shipped in order to transport the living tumors.

Each hamster had its own cage in a large, specially-designed crate. A slanting roof prevented other crates from being placed on top and the hamsters were assured of proper ventilation by runners built into the crate's base to keep other crates ample distance away.

Potato and apple slices, because of their high water content, were put into the cages to keep the hamsters alive during the long period without fresh water.

Five days after departure they arrived in Tokyo. And now they are helping in the study of cancerous tumors on the other side of the globe, thanks to CRI.

CHRISTMAS BAZAAR IS "MOST SUCCESSFUL"; NURSES' FUND TO BENEFIT FROM PROCEEDS

Friends of the Deaconess scored another financial victory for the Nurses fund when they teamed with the nurses to present the annual Christmas Bazaar on Friday, December 4.

Santa arrived early at the Deaconess in the form of Yuletide bargains — all for the benefit of a scholarship fund for nursing students. Employees and visitors thronged to the festive Central Lobby and when they departed with their purchases, the Bazaar had gone further over the top than ever before.

Happy shoppers faced many difficult decisions, so wide was the assortment of gifts. They included handmade Christmas decorations, children's articles, plants and greenery, home baked cakes, cookies and candies, house decorations and "white elephant" items.

Deaconess nurses were in charge of the white elephant and candy tables.

Among the chairmen for the Friends of the Deaconess tables were Mrs. Sheldon Wardwell, Christmas decorations; Miss Mabel Marsh, house decorations; Mrs. Richard Paige, children's items; Mrs. Lyman Hoyt, food; and Mrs. George McClellan, plants and greenery.

CHAMPS FIND HARD GOING IN CLOSE BOWLING RACE

Past champions of the Deaconess Hospital Bowling League are struggling as never before to reach the top or stay there.

Charlie Schraub's 1959 winners hold third place in Division A. They're finding Cliff Fisher's first position team highly elusive.

Most dramatic race is in Division B. Walter Emery's 1959 division champions are in the lead. But only two points behind is the fast-moving team headed by R. D. Lowry. Exciting weeks are ahead for Deaconess bowlers.

An amazing individual record is being scored by Robert Hart. He holds the high singles mark of 166, high 3-string of 406 and high average of 106.

NEW LAW BOOSTS SOCIAL SECURITY DEDUCTION TO 3%

Starting January 1, 1960, the Social Security law requires an increase in employees' Social Security deductions from the old 2¼ percent to the new rate of 3 per cent of pay.

The tax will be deducted at this rate each pay day on all wages up to $4,800 during the year.

The Hospital will increase its contribution to match yours, dollar for dollar. This means the Hospital will also pay an amount equal to 3 per cent of your wages to your Social Security account.

Each employee has been issued a booklet entitled, "What Today's Social Security Law Means to You." This explains the new deductions and benefits in detail.

Employees are urged to read it carefully. If you need an additional copy or further information, contact the Personnel Office.

Students attended the hospital party on the 18th and the Friends open house two days later. Miss Howland's Christmas tea was on the 21st, with a Carol Sing the next day in the chapel.

Deaconess nursing students will remember the patients on Christmas Day. They will entertain with carols in the hospital corridors.

R. D. LOWRY TELLS HOW SPECIAL UNITS CUT PATIENTS' COST

Ambulatory and critically ill patients saved $158,000 in expenses through the use of special units at the New England Deaconess Hospital last year, according to R. D. Lowry, executive director.

Mr. Lowry reported to the corporation members and trustees at the annual meeting that by helping to care for themselves in the Hospital Teaching Unit, diabetic patients of Joslin Clinic physicians saved $4 each per day.

Patients in another ambulatory section — the Norwich House — were able to pay $5 less per day for their rooms than regular patients in areas for the more seriously sick. Total savings to ambulatory patients under the new concept were $70,000.

Mr. Lowry disclosed that intense nursing attention provided in the Special Care Unit for seriously ill patients cost $27 per day less than if the patients had the services of private-duty nurses around the clock.

He reported that many hospitals throughout the nation are considering the new method of reducing hospital costs for patients in the ambulatory and critically ill categories.

Dr. Charles Lund, past president of the American Cancer Society and Massachusetts Medical Society, spoke at the meeting on "Cancer Treatment and Research".

DR. SARA JORDAN MOURNED

Deaconess Hospital associates and friends of Dr. Sara M. Jordan, long a member of the staff, a co-founder of the Lahey Clinic and world-eminent authority on gastroenterology, mourned her death on Nov. 21.

Dr. Jordan died of cancer at the age of 75 in the New England Baptist Hospital.

Messages of condolence poured in from all over the world — from statesmen, business leaders and renowned physicians. Her fame had spread to all nations through her medical writings and her work as a specialist in ailments of the stomach and intestines.

Dr. Jordan was born in Newton and was 33 years old when she became a doctor. She was a graduate of Radcliffe and Tufts Medical College. In addition to serving on the Deaconess Hospital staff, she also was on the staffs of the New England Baptist and Robert Breck Brigham Hospitals.

Funeral services were held Nov. 26 at Trinity Church, with a large delegation from Deaconess Hospital among the mourners.

Rev. Dr. Theodore P. Ferris, rector, said in his eulogy, "This is a service of thanksgiving. Our grief, however great it may be, indeed must be, is lost in our gratitude. We are thankful for the life and work of a great doctor.

"She was not only a great doctor, she was a great human being and the two do not always go together. A man or woman can be great in the area of his professional skill and yet be completely undeveloped in the larger area of life.

"Not so with this doctor. As death is a way of clarifying the contributions of a life, we see at this moment, more vividly than before, that this woman was a great human being."

Credit Union Meets

PROUD ACHIEVEMENT

New England Deaconess Hospital employees have earned many expressions of gratitude from patients who have recognized their self-sacrifice and spirit of compassion for the sick. "Letters to the editor" expressing appreciation of patients are printed in nearly every issue of the Pulse. They are received almost daily by R. D. Lowry, executive director, and other hospital officials.

It has become evident in recent years that the generous charity of Deaconess employees extends beyond the hospital walls. Their consideration for the needy — the less fortunate in all areas of human endeavor — has achieved recognition and respect on the broad community level. Willingness of Deaconess employees to accept a role of leadership in community charity through the United Fund campaign has again been proven this year.

Final accounting shows the Deaconess in the forefront for per capita contributions among hospital employees of Greater Boston. In the few years since most major drives were combined into the one United Fund, an outstanding record has been achieved, a tradition of humanitarianism has been established by Deaconess employees.

They have proven to the community the depth of their charity toward others. They have proven in a monetary way their desire to help any one who needs help, as they prove day in and day out through their service to the sick.

Success of the recent United Fund drive at the Deaconess can be attributed to many persons — those who gave and those who sacrificed time, effort and administrative ability to organize and direct the campaign. Foremost among the latter is Walter Emery, campaign chairman for 1959 who gave enthusiasm and leadership to the drive.

To him, to all solicitors and donors who again brought distinct honor to the hospital — a sincere thanks!

LIBRARY, PLAQUES, CRI FLOORS DEDICATED

Memorial plaques, the Gilbert Horrax Memorial Library and expanded facilities at the Cancer Research Institute were dedicated at ceremonies on October 25.

Presiding at the threefold program was Bishop John Wesley Lord, chairman of the board. Ceremonies were held in the Arthur T. Dooley Chapel and the Central Lobby.

John Barnard of the board of trustees and Dr. Richard B. Cattell, representing the medical staff, spoke at dedication of the plaques. These carry the inscription of the name of the benefactor who contributed to Central Building facilities or the person in whose name the funds were given.

Speaking at the recognition of the addition to CRI were Bishop Lord, Executive Director R. D. Lowry and Dr. Shields Warren, pathologist-in-chief and director of laboratories.

Expansion of CRI has provided more facilities for basic research and more flexibility in the use of animals for research. Cancer experiments can now be conducted on a larger scale and over a longer period, a factor of prime importance in the studies of radiation effects on animals.

Dr. James Poppen and Dr. John B. McKittrick of the medical staff, and Helen Horrax Kennedy spoke at the dedication of the Horrax Memorial Library. The new library commemorates the late chief of neurosurgery at the Lahey Clinic and member of the Deaconess staff.

Dr. Horrax founded the neurosurgical program for which both the Lahey Clinic and the Deaconess Hospital are renowned. The library contains a section with books written by Dr. Horrax as well as a portion of his private collection.
